Closed medication supply chains

'The process of prescribing, dispensing and administering medication always involves multiple healthcare providers. Medication Administration provides an up-to-date insight into who should administer which medication and when. This helps to prevent medication errors.'

Support in the medication process

Working with medicines is risky and administering them is a huge responsibility. Errors are still made too often when paper lists are out of date or go missing, or when doses are missed or not signed off. That is why we have developed a medication administration record solution. This gives an up-to-date insight into which healthcare professional should give which medication to the patient and when. It also provides the professional with digital support when administering the medication.

Coordinate medication without making errors

Efficient and error-free digital medication records

The electronic medication administration registration (eMAR) provides an up-to-date digital medication overview at all times. It gives healthcare professionals insight into which medication a client needs to take, and which medication has already been administered. Once administered, the medication is digitally signed off through the app and a notification appears when the time for a dose has passed.

Closed loop

Electronic medication administration registration creates a 'closed loop'. It connects the healthcare providers involved, improve collaboration and makes the medication process less prone to error. Our eMAR solution gives care professionals inside and outside hospitals a quick overview of their clients' current medication status.

Current medication overview

A secure connection to pharmacy information systems allows all authorised persons to have an up-to-date overview of the client's medication at all times. Single sign-on links to electronic client dossiers allow electronic medication administration registration to be seamlessly integrated into the care process.
